

About Our Company

HaappyCo Corporations was founded with the purpose to combat the terrors of the Oil Wars. At the time, a majority of the world's oil supplies had dried up and the miniscule amount left was sold to the highest bidder leaving millions around the world without power and transportation. The world's energy demand had finally surpassed the world's supply of energy and the worst energy crisis in history was in effect. It was at this time that our three founders, Samuel Lee, Janice Winslow, and Pete Simms, dedicated to solving the energy crisis and ending the Oil Wars, came up with a method to utilize 89% of the sun's energy with solar panels. The most efficient solar panels of the era. Through funding from countries all around the world, HaappyCo was created with the purpose to provide every human being access to energy. In just a short five years, solar panels were available and every country and the Oil Wars had completely ended.

Though generations have passed since the Oil Wars, we at HaappyCo are still committed to the same values of our three founders, to provide the most efficient and cost effective energy access to all human beings. Innovation is at the core of our company. We strive to emulate the innovative spirit that led to our original three founders' creation of the solar panels and we continue to provide high quality products globally. At HaappyCo, we go further to make our products better, our employees happier and our planet a better place to be.
